Welcome to

Pflanz Mendrala Funeral Homes

We are committed to helping you and your family throughout a most difficult time in your life by helping to lighten the burden caused by the death of a loved one. Our funeral directors will provide compassionate support and service. They are responsible for transporting the remains of the deceased and the processing of necessary forms and permits. We are always available to answer any questions you may have and to provide you with guidance throughout the planning process. They are here to assist you with whatever you determine is appropriate and desirable for your needs.

The Cremation Process

Cremation is a common form of disposition in the United States. The percentage of cremations to deaths in the United States and Canada has been increasing steadily during the last two decades.

A funeral or memorial service is an important step in helping bereaved families and individuals begin the grieving process, by offering them the opportunity to honor their loved one and to say good-bye. A visitation with a funeral service at a church or funeral home are options that should be considered. Services may happen with the deceased present - embalmed and prepared, then cremated - or with their urn displayed.

Crematories require the use of an appropriate casket or cremation container to hold the body of the deceased in the furnace or retort.

Cremated bodies do not have the appearance or chemical properties of ashes; they are primarily bone fragments. Cremated remains weigh from three to nine pounds, depending on the loved one's size. The cremated remains are then placed in an urn of the family's choosing.

There are several options for disposition of cremated remains. They may be placed in a niche at a columbarium which is designed to hold cremated remains. They may be kept in the home or buried in a cemetery. Some cemeteries require the use of an urn vault; the funeral home will have that information. Families should choose a disposition option that best fits their emotional needs.

The Traditional Burial Process

Traditional funerals can have differences, but all have the same basic structure.

A wake, or visitation, allows people the opportunity to share their sympathies and condolences. There may not be an opportunity to have the chance to do this during the actual funeral ceremony. The body of the deceased will be present in a casket that is either closed or open. Usually, people say a short prayer by the casket and then proceed to share their condolences.

The funeral ceremony will pay tribute to the life of the deceased, reflect on the impact he/she made, and to say a final "goodbye." Often, the funeral ceremony is held at a funeral home, church, or at a cemetery. Funeral ceremonies will include liturgy or religious passages being read, hymns being sung, and the eulogy will be given as well.

Once the funeral service has ended, there may be a vehicle procession to the cemetery. Once at the cemetery, the family and guests gather around the plot or mausoleum. At this point, a final set of prayers, referred to the Rite of Committal, is recited.

Many families decide to have a social gathering after the committal service with food and refreshments. This gives a chance for the family to thank guests for attending and allows everyone to share memories and provide support for each other.

A FUNERAL PRE-PLANNING GUIDE

Planning ahead can be of great benefit to you and those you love. Death is never easy. First, there may be denial that a death has occurred. Later, there may be anger, thoughts of "if only..." depression, and finally acceptance of the fact that a life has been lived. Suppression or denial of the grief process may increase the time required for acceptance to occur.

The earlier survivors accept a death, the better in emotional terms of healing. Visitation with an open casket can help to hasten acceptance. By seeing the loved one's body in a casket, survivors realize that the death is real, and that it has occurred. The support offered by friends and relatives during visitation, funeral, and burial has stood the test of time in assisting families dealing with their grief.

Some people may think that they are doing their friends and family a favor by saying, "Don't make a fuss over me". However, experience shows that your funeral may be the greatest, most loving gift you will ever give those who love you. It helps them say goodbye in a healthy, positive way.

A vital part in preparation is making your final wishes and desires known to those you love. After a death, survivors are often forced by lack of information to guess what the deceased would have wanted.

They may struggle with feelings of guilt for years afterward, worrying that in some way, they may not have carried out the last wishes of their loved one.

A way to spare your survivors this frustration is to take the time now to consider and write down your final wishes and desires. They will then be able to use the information you supply to be sure your chosen way is adhered to. You can consider your "Funeral Pre-Planning Guide" booklet to be a very private first step in the funeral planning process, or you can use it as the foundation upon which you build your pre-arrangement plan. Your Funeral Director can assist you in deciding how far you wish to go in the planning process. The Director can also show you the various types of caskets and vaults available. There is a large selection of style, material, and cost, and your loved ones will appreciate knowing your preferences.

When your booklet is completed, you will need to decide where to keep it. You may want to give it to your spouse, an adult child, a trusted friend, or the person you have selected to be in charge of your final affairs. There are many potential storage places to consider. Home safe, fireproof document box, desk, etc., have all been used. You may even want to leave it with your attorney. Whatever you decide, it is important to make sure that someone close to you knows where it is. That person should be a family member or friend who will be among the first notified of your death. Make sure that the place you choose for safe keeping is easily available at a moment's notice. A safe deposit box is not recommended because there may be a lengthy delay before it can be legally opened.

Please take the time to fill out your booklet now, while you are thinking of it. A little bit of effort on your part today will help your loved ones face a difficult time in the future.

Suppression or denial of the grief process may increase the time required for acceptance to occur.

RESOURCES SSI APPLICANTS

RECIPIENT MAY SET ASIDE FOR FUNERAL AND BURIAL EXPENSES

- 1. $4,500 irrevocable burial trust for funeral services. (Permitted under the burial fund exclusion).
- 2. An irrevocable or revocable trust for the purchase of a casket. (Permitted under the burial space exclusion.
- 3. An irrevocable or revocable trust for the purchase of a burial vault. (Permitted under the burial space exclusion).
- 4. $1,500 face value life insurance policy. Subject to Estate Recovery.
- 5. $2,000 in other liquid resources.

Comments:

Under Wisconsin Law, a funeral home may be party to only one irrevocable trust agreement, which can include the casket and burial vault purchases.

If a revocable trust is preferred for the purchase of a casket and burial vault, the proceeds from these purchases may be placed in one revocable trust.

Since August 2014, the use of one irrevocable trust for the prepayment of funeral services up to $4,500 and the purchase of a casket and burial vault has been permitted. If one irrevocable trust is used for the prepayment of funeral services and the purchase of a casket and burial vault, the first $4,500 of the funds deposited will be considered as set aside for funeral services.

There has not been a limit placed on the amount that may be set aside for the purchase of a casket or a burial vault; however, social service workers do have discretion to question the amounts expended on these purchases and to require that other choices be made.

PFLANZ MENDRALA FUNERAL HOMES

TERMS OF PAYMENT

When a death occurs in a family, the deceased or their family may or may not have the resources in place at the time of death to cover the funeral expenses. Usual and customary expenses are covered by a life insurance assignment, proceeds from the deceased's estate, or pre-paid funeral plans. If none of these exist, then the responsible party for the arrangements would be responsible for payment.

If no insurance assignment or pre-paid funeral plan is in effect, our terms of payment are 25% down payment on the funeral home charges, unpaid balance paid within 30 days, and charges to third parties or cash advances need to be paid on or before the day of services.

Again, we strongly state that our emphasis as a funeral home is to provide the highest standard of attention, service, and understanding to your family during your loss. In order to do so we need to provide the highest quality staff and facilities to meet your needs, and that is accomplished by remaining strong economically.

(These prices are effective as of April 1, 2024 and are subject to change without notice.) The goods and services shown below are those we can provide to our customers. You may choose only the items you desire. However, any funeral arrangements you select will include a charge for our basic services and overhead. If legal or other requirements mean you must buy any items you did not specifically ask for, we will explain the reason in writing on the statement we provide describing the funeral goods and services you selected.

AFTERCARE

Pflanz Mendrala Funeral Home is pleased to provide an aftercare program for its bereaved families. This service began in 1999 and continues to provide a variety of options for counseling and other resources to those who are grieving the death of a loved one. There is no additional cost for this service, it is provided as one of our basic services.

Among the services provide are:

- A follow-up contact from our aftercare coordinator to offer help, support, and advise.
- Distribution of handouts and other materials to assist you in the mourning process.
- References for grief support groups, therapists and other types of grief support resources.
- A lending library of books about death and grief for adults and children.
- Educational programs on Grief and Loss.

Grief is your response to a great loss in your life. It is the feeling that comes in response to something like an amputation; when someone you love dies, you may feel like a part of you is suddenly missing.

Mourning is the process which occurs that will assist you in learning to function again, despite the death of your loved one.

We take a new turn in our journey with the death of a loved one. Sometimes our pace is slowed just a little, but many times it may seem that it is impossible to put one foot in front of the other. Grief support can provide help, a little, or a lot. We are available to assist with both.

For more information, or assistance on your journey, please contact the Pflanz Mendrala Funeral Home at 608-742-2126.

And can it be that in a world so full and busy the loss of one creature makes a void in any heart so wide and deep that nothing but the width and depth of eternity can fill it up!
